MAKING THE MOST OF WHAT WE HAVE: The CCHS Medical Program

Toby had double trouble when she arrived at the shelter. She was homeless, and she was in pain – constantly squinting because the eyelashes of one of her lower lids were rubbing against the tender surface of her eye.

Cooper, left, formerly Rory, and Emma

This congenital condition, known as entropion, is correctable with surgery, and fortunately for Toby, CCHS veterinarian Jennifer Stone stepped in. Assisted by a fourth-year veterinary student from the University of Illinois, she performed the procedure in the medical unit at the shelter, and now Toby is healthy and active in her new home.

Then there was Rory, a big marmalade cat, with an eye infection.

He visited the cramped medical facilities at the shelter many times during his treatment program, and today he enjoys a loving home with several feline siblings.

Cramped Quarters, Quality Care

enormous impact. Here is where shelter staff stitch wounds, lance abscesses, remove masses, repair hernias, sometimes clean teeth, and perform many other procedures that make the animals in our care more comfortable and adoptable. And here is where we spay and neuter pets before we send them back into the community, so that they won't contribute to the tragic pet overpopulation. The treatment room is just as small but offers the same quality care to the hundreds of animals at the shelter awaiting permanent homes.

Each year CCHS spends more than $75,000 on medical and surgical supplies.

Success stories like Toby and Rory's are possible because of the CCHS medical program, supported by your generous contributions.

Critical to the well-being and comfort of the hundreds of animals that come through the shelter each year, funds from the medical program support the treatment of injuries and chronic conditions, spay/neuter operations, and vaccinations and diagnostic testing. Each adoptable animal gets a complete physical. Cats are tested for feline leukemia, and dogs are checked and sometimes treated for heartworm. All are

From the Director's Desk

At this writing we have 530 animals in our care. The enormous task of caring and finding homes for these animals weighs heavily, though the staff and logic tell me that with kitten season coming to an end the shelter population will go down. The care of these animals has a high financial and emotional cost.

We are doing what we can to reduce our costs. Every line item in the budget is being scrutinized to see where we can cut. We won't cut in areas directly affecting the health and welfare of the animals. We will cut our administrative costs by combining our annual membership appeal with this issue of Pawprints, which will save us thousands of dollars. This is money better allocated to the direct care of the animals.

We need your help. Let your friends and families know that we have wonderful healthy and happy animals waiting to share their home and lives. Show your financial support by renewing your membership in the Humane Society by responding to this appeal. (See page 15 for form).

Combining our annual membership mailing with Pawprints may be risky. You – our members and supporters – are used to responding to a separate appeal. We think this is worth a try. Please renew your membership in the society now. 🐾

The Ms. Garbo Fund

“The trouble with a kitten is that it eventually becomes a cat.”

For those of us who love felines, age makes no difference. In a shelter setting healthy kittens quickly steal the hearts of the adopters and find homes more readily than do their older cousins. Cats, a year or more old, often have a hard time finding someone to give them a home.

Do you have room in your heart and in your home to adopt two adult cats? A generous donor is willing to help you do just that. The Ms. Garbo Fund has been established by Jack and Shelby Stifle to help families adopt the second adult by paying the adoption fee. CCHS has more than 400 felines in its care. Please consider giving one – or two – of these great animals a good home. Visit the animals at the shelter and ask about the Ms. Garbo Fund. 🐾

Annual meeting draws crowd of 75 CCHS members, supporters

The bottom line, interim executive director Harriett Weatherford said at the CCHS annual meeting Sept. 15, is what's best for the animals.

And even though the bottom line of CCHS's financial report was $83,000 in the red at the end of the fiscal year, Weatherford said the animals will continue to get the finest care.

More than 75 members in attendance at the Urbana Civic Center heard Dr. Jennifer Stone, who joined the CCHS staff in May, detail the extensive medical program she heads and heard Weatherford give her state of the shelter report. Ten board members were elected.

Dr. Stone emphasized that CCHS is not a no-kill shelter. Animals that show multiple health problems or do not respond to treatment may be euthanized when the medical staff feels the animal will have a low quality of life. Animals will not be put up for adoption if they exhibit aggression over food, with other dogs or toward people. Behavioral tests are part of the duties of the medical staff, and she would like implement additional screening for those breeds in which these traits are more common.

The medical staff is evaluating the nutrition program at the shelter, and Dr. Stone said their evaluation of the Hill's Program suggests that CCHS would be able to provide a higher quality food than it currently does at a savings of about 50 percent. She said the board will vote on this issue soon. (See story page 1 for the bulk of her presentation)

Weatherford said CCHS supports the county's plan to create its own impoundment facility, and hopes to continue the good relationship with the county and the cities.

"Our job is to adopt animals," she said.

The deficit in the shelter's bottom line was covered by prior years' earnings. An audit of the CCHS records will take place in October and will be available on the Web site, Weatherford said.

To ensure a healthier budget this year, she said every event CCHS does has to be a fund-raising event.

"We're doing the big things (A Fetching Ball was Oct. 8) and the little things, like dog washes and car washes (the Sept. 18 car wash raised $900). We'll do more. And we have to take the animals to where the people are," so more off-site adoption events, such as those successful at PetsMart and Select Comfort and elsewhere will take place.

One cost-cutting measure is to forgo a separate membership mailing this fall by including an appeal in this issue of Pawprints (See envelope in the middle of this issue and form on page 15.)

Weatherford said the census at the shelter has remained constant over her 15 years of involvement at CCHS. About 5,500 animals come into the shelter each year. About 3,000 are adopted, and about 1,900 are euthanized or die at the shelter. About 550 are returned to their owners.

Sixty-nine ballots were cast. Because of the large number of new directors this year, and the need to retain a three-year rotation, lots will be drawn for one-, two- or three-year-terms at the board's organizational meeting Oct. 13. Elected: Lisa Burgoon, Lauren Conrad, Chuck Feinen, Brad Hudson, Vicki Jarrell, Bruce Kelso, Carole Lindholm, Leroy Neitzel, Mare Payne and Gretchen Reid. 🐾

Daisy Trust goal: Increase dog adoptions

A trust fund has been established by a long-time supporter of CCHS in memory of her beloved terrier. The Daisy Trust is intended to fund programs and activities aimed at increasing dog adoptions.

The first account was set up to fund the PhD program, coordinated by Brianna Guidi, which teaches dogs the basic niceties that we'd all love for our canine companions to know. Seven to eight volunteers are involved in the training and our hopes are to expand the program to include more trainers and adoptable dogs. Brianna has been involved with PhD since February and 50 dogs have been encouraged to sit on command, take a treat nicely and walk on lead. Forty-five dogs have finished the program and have been adopted.

The Daisy Trust has also made it possible to acquire a new anesthesia machine, which has enabled our veterinary staff to have two veterinarians operating at the same time. This has greatly improved our ability to ensure that as many adoptable animals as possible are altered before they go home. 🐾 examined and treated for internal parasites, fleas, ticks and ear mites. Every adopted animal gets a microchip and a “going home” physical as well.

“We’re constantly working to make the medical program at the shelter more effective and more professional,” says Dr. Stone. She cites several recent improvements, including:

Staffing

- A fourth-year U. of I. vet student on a clinical rotation in the shelter provides direct animal care to the pets. The student receives invaluable experience in a multi-animal environment while CCHS gains critical medical expertise at minimal cost.

- Staff training has been enhanced to increase clinical proficiency and to improve specific skills.

Equipment

- A new anesthesia machine, added this summer, increases the number of surgeries that can be performed at the shelter.

- A high-quality microscope, recently donated, is dedicated to cytology and other specialized exams. The older microscope is now used for routine fecal tests.

Facilities

- Recent physical improvements to the on-site operating room mean that a greater number of operations, particularly spay/neuters, can be performed at the shelter.

What It Takes Today

Like medical care for humans, the medical program for the pets at the CCHS shelter isn’t cheap.

More than $75,000 is spent on medical and surgical supplies annually. Personnel costs – for Jen Stone; Cindy Johnson, a part-time veterinarian; other CCHS staff; and outside veterinary services – increase the annual expenses to more than $220,000 per year. Equipment costs and facilities improvements, made incrementally as funds permit, add significantly to the bottom line of the program.

While the adoption fees for cats and dogs were recently increased by a modest $10 (to $75 for cats and $85 for dogs), the fees do not begin to cover the cost of services that directly affect the quality of life for the pets at the shelter.

support the medical program and allow us to reach our program goals of providing healthier animals to the community sooner.

A Time of Change

“We’re in a time of change, for the better,” says veterinarian Stone. Her vision for the future includes enhanced training programs, equipment and facilities.

You can turn that shared vision into reality. Your gift in support of the CCHS medical program will have a direct effect on the lives of pets that we serve. Please use the enclosed reply envelope to show your support for the medical program and help CCHS reach its program goals sooner. 🐾

With Your Help: Plans for the Future of the Medical Program

Staffing

- Development of new treatment protocols
- More extensive behavioral testing of the pets before adoption to better identify aggression toward people, food or other animals

- More formal training of CCHS staff on an ongoing basis

- Development of updated information for adopters and staff
- ### Equipment

- Supply an expanded operating room facility with the needed equipment
- Purchase at least one more surgical light, and another surgery table and anesthesia machine
- Upgrade lab equipment, such as an otoscope for examining ears, a tympanic thermometer and a digital scale in order to provide better physical exams

- A new computer and printer for the medical program

Facilities

- Reconfigure square footage currently used for an office to enlarge the operating room suite

Please use the enclosed envelope to send your membership renewal – and an extra gift for the medical program – today.

"Oh my! Thank you! Your generous gifts and your membership will be put to good use at CCHS."

Thank You Volunteers

In a time when budgets are tight, many people look for ways to make a difference in their community that does not require a monetary donation. Volunteering your time is a great way to help the community, and it is also one of the best ways to help homeless animals. Whether you prefer to walk dogs or cuddle cats, or to help during a fund-raising event, you can make a big difference in the lives of many homeless animals. When you give animals the gift of your time, you'll get back as much as you give – maybe even more! CCHS has been lucky to have so many dedicated volunteers give so much of their time. In 2003, volunteers gave more than 18,000 hours to the homeless animals of Champaign County.

Last year, volunteers gave almost 7,500 hours at the shelter walking dogs so they could get fresh air and exercise; cuddling cats so they could enjoy a warm, comfy lap; and helping the medical staff give medications to sick animals. Six volunteers gave more than 100 hours: Alex Boyd, Lisa Burgoon, Sonda Gabriel, Nancy Krug, Cherie Lyn and Bob Martin. Joanne Haynes gave more than 250 hours to the shelter, as did Brad Hudson. If you include events, Brad's total jumps to more than 300 hours.

Other volunteers worked nearly 3,000 hours at events such as the Giant Garage Sale and A Fetching Ball that raised more than $100,000. Many others volunteered at the Kitten Shower and Adopt-A-Thons to help place our homeless pets into new, loving homes.

Still other volunteers spent more than 7,500 hours as foster parents, taking the neediest

Volunteer Spotlight: Hannah Leskosky

Stories on the news about young people running afoul of the law may make you wonder about the future. If you want to be reassured that there is still hope for today's kids, that there are still a lot of good kids with big hearts and love to give, visit CCHS on any given weekend and you will see Junior Volunteers, ages 10 to 15 years old, giving their valuable time to the animals in our care. Junior Volunteers such as Hannah Leskosky.

What started out as a project for her Bat Mitzvah has turned into a long-term volunteer position. Hannah, along with her mother, May Berenbaum, has been a part of the CCHS volunteer program for more than a year. As a Junior Volunteer, Hannah comes to the shelter regularly to spend time cuddling the numerous cats in our care. She plays with them, cuddles them, brushes them, and sometimes, simply gives them a warm lap to curl up in. Hannah has also helped at some of the shelter's adoption events, such as Adopt-a-Thons and the Kitten Shower. Hannah even requested that guests at her Bat Mitzvah celebration bring a donation for the shelter, instead of gifts for her. Hannah stunned all of the CCHS staff when she brought in the donations from the celebration – donations that exceeded $2,100.

The CCHS staff is grateful to Hannah for her generosity and dedication to CCHS. Her time and effort proves that even Junior Volunteers can make the biggest difference to some of the animals in our care. 🐾 animals into their homes until they were ready to be adopted. They cared for orphaned puppies and kittens, many needing to be bottle fed around the clock. They also cared for sick animals whose medical needs varied from upper respiratory infections, to heartworm to ringworm. Some foster homes provide socialization for otherwise healthy animals that are scared or timid, and need someone to show them love so they learn to trust people.

Whatever the job – from cleaning cages to folding newspapers to bottle feedings, every CCHS volunteer has made a difference in the lives of homeless pets. A huge, heartfelt thank you to all of the valuable CCHS volunteers from all of the CCHS staff, as well as all of the animals in our care. We couldn't do this without you.

Are you prepared if disaster strikes? Are your pets?

Disasters come in all forms. No matter where you live, the unexpected can occur. From blizzards to earthquakes to tornados, emergencies happen, which means that everyone should have a disaster plan for their family – including their pets.

“It’s crucial to make plans ahead of time to ensure your pets’ safety in times of disaster,” says Betsy McFarland, director of communications for companion animals for the Humane Society of the United States. “Whether it’s a natural disaster or a terrorist attack, you must have a plan in place. Pets depend on their caregivers to provide for their safety and well being.”

Remember that good disaster planning takes every possibility into consideration. It is imperative that you make plans ahead of time to evacuate your family and your pets in any situation. Arrange for a trusted neighbor who is frequently at home to evacuate your pets if an evacuation order is issued and you are at work. Keep a three-day supply of your pet’s food, medicines, leash, veterinary records and other necessities altogether in a pet carrier that’s ready to go.

If You Evacuate, Take Your Pets

The single most important thing you can do to protect your pets is to take them with you when you leave. Animals left behind in a disaster can easily be injured, lost or killed. Animals turned loose to fend for themselves are likely to become victims of exposure, starvation, predators, contaminated food or water, or accidents. Leaving dogs tied or chained outside in a disaster can be a death sentence.

Don’t Forget ID

Your pets should be wearing up-to-date identification at all times. It’s a good idea to include the phone number of a friend or relative outside your immediate area.

Find a Safe Place Ahead of Time

Because evacuation shelters generally don’t accept pets (except for service animals), you must plan ahead to ensure that your family and pets will have a safe place to stay.

- Contact hotels and motels outside your immediate area to check policies on accepting pets. Ask about any restrictions on number, size and species. Ask if “no pet” policies would be waived in an emergency. Make a list of pet-friendly places, and call ahead for a reservation as soon as you think you might have to leave your home.

- Check with friends, relatives or others outside your immediate area. Ask if they would be able to shelter you and your animals or just your animals, if necessary. If you have more than one pet, you may have to be prepared to house them separately.

- Make a list of boarding facilities and veterinary offices that might be able to shelter animals in emergencies; include 24-hour telephone numbers.

If You Don’t Evacuate

If your family and pets must wait out a storm or other disaster at home, identify a safe area of your home where you can all stay together.

- Keep dogs on leashes and cats in carriers, and make sure they are wearing identification.

- Have any medications and a supply of pet food and water inside watertight containers, along with your other emergency supplies.

As the Disaster Approaches

- Call to confirm emergency shelter arrangements for you and your pets.

- Make sure your disaster supplies are ready to go, including your pet disaster kit.

- Bring pets into the house and confine them so you can leave quickly.

Whether it’s a tornado, a traffic accident or a terrorist attack, preparedness can help save lives. Pets are part of the family and it’s imperative that they be included in all family disaster plans. Remember, they’re counting on you. 🐾

Ideas for Giving at Year End

A gift to the CCHS demonstrates your belief in our mission and reinforces your commitment to making a difference in the lives of the homeless pets in our care. Many types of gifts allow you to fulfill your charitable intentions and may result in immediate and possible future benefits for you.

Gifts of Cash

Cash contributions are deductible as an itemized deduction in the year you make the donation, up to a total of 50 percent of your adjusted gross income. Excess charitable donations can be carried forward for up to five additional years.

Gifts of Securities

The best stocks to donate are those that have increased greatly in value, particularly those producing a low yield. In order to preserve tax advantages, it is critical that you transfer the physical securities to CCHS rather than the proceeds from a sale.

- Appreciated Securities. If you donate stock that has risen in value and that you've held for more than one year, you pay no capital gains tax on the transaction and are entitled to a charitable deduction for the full market value of the stock. (Your income tax deduction is limited to 30 percent of your adjusted gross income. Any excess can be carried forward for five additional years.) If you wish to continue investing in a specific stock, you could donate the stock to us and then use cash to purchase shares with the same company, thus increasing your cost basis to current fair market value.

- Depreciated Securities. If you have stock losses, generally you should not contribute the stock, but rather sell the stock yourself to realize the loss for tax purposes. You can then contribute the cash and take a charitable deduction.

- Mutual Funds. A charitable contribution of mutual fund shares can provide the same tax advantages as a gift of appreciated stock. Due to the complexities involved in the transfer of mutual fund shares, we encourage you to begin the transfer process well before Dec. 31.

Gifts of Life Insurance

You can contribute a life insurance policy to CCHS by naming us either as the owner of the policy or simply as the beneficiary. If you name us as owner and beneficiary, you will be entitled to an income tax deduction limited to the lower of the value of the policy or your cost basis in the contract. In addition, if you continue to pay premiums on a policy that we own, you can deduct the premium payments.

Life Income Gifts

Life income gifts allow you to receive an income as a result of making a charitable gift. Depending upon the plan you choose, the income can be fixed or variable, and can be for you or other beneficiaries you choose. For example, you might create a charitable remainder trust to pay income to you for life and contribute money, stock or property to it. Once placed in the trust, the assets can be sold (without capital gains tax) and the proceeds reinvested to produce a higher yield. Life income gifts entitle you to an immediate income tax deduction, which is based on the current value of your gift to us.

Gifts of Real Estate

If you own property that is not subject to a mortgage and has appreciated in value, a charitable gift may be an attractive option. You can claim an income tax deduction based upon the fair market value of the property, avoid all capital gains taxes and remove the asset from your taxable estate. Or, you can transfer your home or farm to us now and continue to use the property for life. Because of the complexities involved, we encourage you to contact us while working with your financial advisor.

Your support can benefit CCHS and create a legacy that touches the lives of homeless pets. Please contact us at 344-7297 for more information. 🐾
